Xu Sangeng (1826–1890), a native of Shangyu, Zhejiang, courtesy name Xingu, literary names Jonglei, Xiuhai, Jinlei, Shenguo, Yuliangsheng, Daheng, Xiuhai, Jinlei daoshi, Jinlei daoren, Jinlei shanmin, Jianmu daoshi, Laoxingeng, Jinglei, Xiuhai, Shangyufu, Heran sanren and Laoxiu, travelled extensively and lived in Guangdong temporarily. His studio was called Siyu shi. Xu was a calligrapher of the seal and clerical scripts and a seal carver. He owed his seal script to the Stele for the Divine Omen and his clerical script to the Han stelae. As for the seal carving, he first modelled on Chen Hongshou and Zhao Zhichen, and then Deng Shiru and Wu Xizai, making expressiveness and dynamism the prominent features in his seals. His fluent and assured execution is exemplified in his side inscriptions in the running and regular scripts. In addition to influencing Huang Shiling, Qi Baishi and the Lingnan seal carvers, he had made an impact on the calligraphy and seal carving in Japan as traces of his style can be gleaned from the seals by Japanese artists like Maruyama Taiu, Akiyama Hakugan, Nishikawa Shundou and Nakamura Randai. When Xu sojourned in Suzhou, he made friends with the seal carver Ye Tinguan before he continued his journey to Tianjin, Beijing, Hong Kong and Guangzhou. He also had close contact with Shen Shuyong, Cen Zhongtao, Sun Xi and Wang Tao. His works include Jinlei shanmin yincun and Siyu shi yinpu.
